Letter

Editor:

Our regular visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile, as you know, is scheduled for Dec. 22 and I want to explain to you why this 200 quota when usually we only ask for 100. Just one reason, no one else would schedule a visit for the week of Dec. 22 thru 26 and thus we are the only ones to collect the 200 units needed to furnish all the hospitals through the holidays. It is imperative that we come up with 200 units on that day. If we do not, just remember that someone may lose their life during the holidays because you and I did not care enough to take the time to come out and donate.

Mr. Jarvis Oxner of Gladstone received his 3-gallon pin, rather than 1-gallon pin, as stated in the Nov. 6 edition of the Times-Virginian.

The Red Cross is sending a much larger staff than usual so that you will not have to wait and waste your precious time as I know we are all so busy at this time of the year. The hours will be the same 12 to 6 p.m. but with the larger staff I am sure you will not have to wait very long. We have also decided to stay at Liberty Baptist Church and will utilize their recreation room; also for this visit.

Remember someone is counting on you to come out and donate on Dec. 22.

Sincerely,
Alice C. Martin
Chm. Blood Services

APS students observe 'Education Week'

As the Appomattox Primary School students, staff, and parents reflect on the Observance of American Education Week, November 16-22, 1980, priority time is given to caring, communicating, and competency-based education.

Parents and educators work together in the best interest of the child. "Preparation for the Future" works effectively when there is close cooperation between the community and school. This cooperative spirit, concern and support is required to achieve true quality education and simultaneously, equality in education.

The decade of the 80' is a time of great diversity in needs, wants, and interests for parents, teachers, and taxpayers as well as children. Almost everyone will provide an opinion if not an answer as to what schools should do. Educational decisions for the 80's will be influenced greatly by factors outside of the educational enterprise: inflation, energy costs, legislation, etc. Even with this trend, professional educators know (1) the climate of schools and classrooms, (2) student-teacher ratios, (3) teacher-training-in-service, and (4) how children learn best (psychology of learning) have a profound effect on learning, attitude, and self concept. Self-respect creates responsible, productive thinking individuals.

As stated earlier, together, parents and teachers work in the best interest for the child. Responsibilities are indeed great for both educators and parents. Parents are the child's first teacher. The teacher is eager to help your child feel the wonderful sense of success through learning... the desire for learning which continues even after the adult is no long present...truly "Preparation for the Future".

AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK AT APPOMATTOX PRIMARY SCHOOL

"Education for the '80's . . . . . Preparation for the Future

The Cultural Arts Committee of the PTA has collected artifacts to display and provide a discovery area in natural-history. Pre-School children (ages 2-4) enjoy the value of "hands-on" experiences. PTA projects include providing cultural enrichment activities and programs for the students.

At a recent morning coffee, one parent shares thoughts with others: "Help your child at home by spending time with your child, hold on to each moment while you may. Hold your children close - childhood is so short."

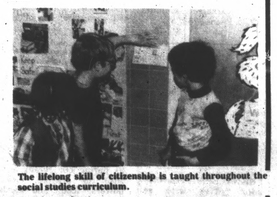
Music instruction helps in teaching the basic skills of listening, following directions, and voice control. Development in these areas also helps in learning to read.

Construction play teaches a pattern for learning, creativity, and getting along with others.

Physical education activities can be designed specifically to enhance the learning abilities necessary to reading and other subjects. Such activities must be emphasized along with play and basic skill development to build a good self-concept, self-confidence, and cooperation in group activities.

Volunteers are important people by serving as an extra pair of hands in the learning process. Learn more education and the process by becoming a volunteer.

Staff development is scheduled throughout the school year. Teachers give attention to the way students learn best.



The lifelong skill of citizenship is taught throughout the social studies curriculum.
